DEBUT

JOHNSTON MARKLEE

Architecture
LOS ANGELES

As artistic directors of the 2017 Chicago Architecture Biennial, Sharon Johnston and Mark Lee conceived the theme "Make New History," working with the exhibition's 141 participants to explore how the latest design can upend convention and redefine our world. Certainly this design duo knows a thing or two about that. After founding their L.A.-based firm, Johnston Marklee, in 1998, the duo quickly built a reputation for daring houses with complex geometries, cerebral concepts, and site-specific structural acrobatics. And residential architecture remains a passion. (Take, as evidence, their 2016 book, House Is a House Is a House Is a House Is a House.) But the firm has also branched out to institutional and commercial projects: an ongoing update to Chicago's Museum of Contemporary Art, a retail building in Miami's Design District, and the eagerly awaited Menil Drawing Institute in Houston, opening later this year.

A GLIMPSE OF FASHION STAR TORY BURCH'S SOUTHAMPTON GARDEN BY PERRY GUILLOT.

AD100
DEBUT

PERRY GUILLOT INC.

Landscape Design
SOUTHAMPTON, NEW YORK

Landscape architect Perry Guillot's idol is not a garden giant of the past but rather an American minimalist sculptor. "Fred Sandback's work is the all-time greatest example of accomplishing so much by doing so little," explains Guillot, whose sweeping swaths for fashion's Tory Burch and style gurus Delphine and Reed Krakoff possess a similarly powerful restraint. Guillot shapes properties in poetic fashion, subtly blending heroic sight lines and vanishing points with swelling hills, artfully clumped trees, bands of boxwood, and frothing fescue grass. Small wonder that when AD asked Guillot about the earthly paradises that continually inspire him, he cited Central Park's Sheep Meadow, an engineering feat that looks utterly natural.
